LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

We desire to procure the services of a local agent in every Post Office District in the State. Will our friends act, or procure the services of some efficient person in our behalf? Believing that the circulation of the Democrat may be materially extended, we make this appeal to our friends in its behalf.

The Editors of the Journal are in a controversy now with the Administration papers as to the position of the party that carried Kentucky under a military election. This party, the Journal asserts, is opposed to the policy of the President and his Administration.

There is a significant fact against the Journal. This party felt itself beaten in this State, was struck with consternation and invoked the military. The aid was given. This party resolved against martial law in States where war did not exist, but they invited martial law. They told the people that if they were not elected, a Military Governor would be appointed by the President, and by this prediction invited it. The very prediction was a confession that their rule would be satisfactory to the Administration.

Now, certainly it is very natural for an impartial spectator, and more so for a partial one, to conclude that this must be an Administration party. Besides, the temper of some of the party is unmistakable. They are Administration men, and hardly disguise it. The current sets in that direction.

The Journal has been trying to explain how it happened that a Democrat was insulted in their Convention and not allowed to speak. Administration men were here, wrote accounts of the transaction, gloried in it, and put it down as an evidence of wholesome progress in the Union party of Kentucky. The platform on which they pretend to stand condemns their own acts, and it was not cordially adopted. The committee did not all like it.

There were objections; but it was reported as the best they could do. They swallowed it, with one resolution that virtually nullified all the rest—that they would give unconditionally all the resources of the country to put down the rebellion. It was after that quite unimportant what faults they had to find. What more do Abolitionists want?

Grimm as much as you please. If you will give us all the resources of the country, to use our way, it is all we ask. And what more could they ask?

Here is the point, the cardinal position of this party—an unconditional supply of means till the rebellion is put down, no matter how these means are used. That is the well-understood position of this party. No Administration convention can do more. They are to furnish unconditionally all the men and all the money. That will do. That is all that can be asked; and when has any party gone further in that direction than this party in Kentucky?

To understand the full effect of the pledge, we call attention again to a point not to be overlooked.

Abraham Lincoln decides when the rebellion is put down. He, by law, decides when it began, and, of course, when it ceases to exist. Congress did pass a resolution about the object of the war, and when it should cease, but that is all a nullity. It will exist at the discretion of Abraham Lincoln, and he is to have all the men and money needful until it is put down. He will decide that it is not ended until the people of a State submit to confiscation bills, and what is more important, his proclamation of January 1, 1863. As long as resistance to these measures remain the rebellion remains. He will use the army as he has used it in this State, to control elections in the seceded States, and place factions in power that will accept his terms. He, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, fixes the conditions of surrender. Congress has no voice in the matter; and no control except in holding the purse; and that this party in Kentucky, refuse to do. They are pledged to give unconditionally until the constituted authority, the President, says the rebellion is put down.

This position is as complete a surrender to the Abolitionists, as Louisiana will have to make, before she is decided not to be involved.

It is very true that is not the voice of Kentucky. Those who voted with this party did not, half of them, so understand it. They meant to put down the rebellion, that was all, and looked no further. The question, how this rebellion is to be put down, and who is to decide when it is down, they leave to the President. Their members of Congress are to furnish men and money; that is their business.

The Administration party is satisfied with this, and it would be very unreasonable if they were not. How many of the party in Kentucky will stand by their doctrine remains to be seen. Some of them will not. The Louisville Journal is trying to wriggle out now, but he may be whipped in. Some of them will go the whole length of supporting Abolitionism, and swear all the while that they hate Abolitionists. The people of Kentucky can only support such doings under martial law and the bayonet.

We shall be compelled to keep the run of the contest between the Louisville Journal and the Cincinnati Gazette. We want each to use the other up, and shall take pleasure in helping both sides. We suggest to the Gazette to throw General Rousseau's real speech at the Journal. It was a speech the editor of the Gazette would delight to read. The Louisville Journal pretended to publish a report of the speech, but it was not the speech of the General made. The good part, that would delight the Gazette men, the Journal omitted, as they were not suited to appreciate it. We believe fully that the Confederacy has "gone up" or down, and that its leaders are aware of it. We believe the people, while fully resolved to maintain the integrity of the Union, are also anxious for peace; but we have little confidence in those called the Administration and "friends of the Administration." As long as the war is a paying speculation by which martial law can carry elections, we have little hope for peace, unless it is made for the purpose. Halleck declared, of bringing the army back to crush out the "Copperheads." Confidence in the army as defenders of the law, we would willingly risk this; but we distrust the Administration.

Brutus J. Clay did not vote to accept Lincoln's proposition for the emancipation of slaves in this State, as the N. Y. Tribune says. We corrected a paragraph which appeared in the Democrat to that effect. He voted against a resolution condemning the declaration of martial law in States where war did not exist. The vote on each resolution is designated by the number of it, and as there are two sets printed in the House Journal, differently numbered, the mistake was easily made. Mr. Clay, however, is about as radical as any one could desire. His speech in the Legislature was an elaborate apology for the Administration—much, in the general drift, like that on which Brantley says he didn't make at Carrollton.

Stanton and Halleck have both claimed the credit of running the batteries by which Vicksburg was taken. Gen. Grant states that the credit was his own. We expect S. and H. to claim to have put Julius Caesar and Napoleon up to a thing or two.

Boston has lost her high position as the center of the intellectual Universe. The grand overwhelming intellect, "like some ancient ruin," has turned up in New York's intelligence, which makes the great intellects of modern Europe in comparison as small potates. Hereafter the sows will go down to Gotham, as the Mowers containing the contractors of their adoration. Boston is nowhere

The Army—How it is Paid.

From Little Collected "Army Pay Digest and R-ways Calendar" we gather the following increasing items:

The pay of a Major General is $2,640 a year, and he is entitled to fifteen rations a day, which amounts at thirty cents each, net the sum of $1,800 a month, with an additional emoluments of $700. A Major General is also entitled to four servants, whose rations (one each) he can also command, and to five horses, for which he can draw forty cents each a day. When he commands a corps, an exemplary conduct, soldierly bearing, and sound service. It would not be overstating the merits of this company to say many of them would fill with credit any position in a cavalry regiment.
